In the first place, if a Minister himself did ways and character, he would receive plenty of assistance in acquiring it from his secretary. relief of the famine. Moreover, it is questionable how far an intimate acquaintance with Chinese modes of thought and lines of policy is necessary to a British Representative. Such a knowledge might even prove a positive disadvantage. What he has to do is not so much to argue as to insist. Having once laid down certain well-considered domands, he would only need to maintain his ground, and see that they were carried out when acceded to. Sir THOMAS WADE'S mistake in the recent difficulty arising out of the MARGARY affair would seem to have been in allowing the Chinese Government to waste months in talking to no real purpose. Mr. Johnston was for the bankrupt. authorities with the fact that he was in earnest and would not be trifled with. He won a diplomatic victory finally, it is true, but there are some very weak places in it, which go far towards impairing its value. The fact that the Home Government has not yet ratified the Convention which he concluded with the astute LI Hung-chang induces the im pression that the noble lord the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs sees flaws in some of its provisions, or is It also includes a mass of useful information altogether satisfied with it. Putting aside, in addition to that usually found in works of the however, for the present, the diplomatic achievements or failures of Sir Thomas The larger Directory contains the different WADE, and returning to the subject more im-Treaties and Conventions made by China and | mediately under consideration, it is fair to Japan with foreign countries, together with assume that a stranger with a handle to his various Acts, Ordinances, and Regulations re- name, and who had never filled a subordinate ran against the prisoner, who appeared to be a position in Her Majesty's diplomatic service It is further embellished with a Chrome- in China, would have greater weight at sit down, but he would not, and he put him on Peking, where high rank in officials is deemed a matter of great importance. With regard to the argument about promotion, that is, after all, easily disposed of. In the first instance it by no means follows that a good Chromo-lithograph Plate of the NEW Chinese secretary will make an able Minister. He may be an extraordinary linguist and a capable official in other ways, but at the same time be entirely destitute of those qualities -such as tact, firmness, and equanimity of temper-which are essential in a Minister. THE MISSION OF THE TIDES. Lond laughed the river as it sped, " With fairy fountains at its head, The broad sea at its feet: But sullenly it dashed and swopt Past the rough rock, whose slidow crept Across the waters ficet.

A little rock; unshaped and bore, No moss, no grasses clustered there, But yet a stordy boy Lannelied there his boat, and loved the spot And built thereon a mimic cot-

A work of pride and joy. " Poor rock, the tides will buffet theel-And Time will blench thine head," said he, And so the years went by, The boy had heightened to a man, But just the rock the river ran,

And laughed against the sky. And now the man was worn and old, But still the river, hilght and bold, Dashed downward to the sea. But now the little rock was fair. For earth and moss found lodgment there, And rustling ercenery.

So the man passed, and noted well That smiling spot amidst the swell Of waters broad and high; And mused thereon: "We stand and wait, While Times and Tides shape out our Fate, Beneath a friendly sky."

Palience and hope! the tides are strong, But bear they not God's zifts along Upon their currents wide? And in the end, when Time is dead, 'And God's good work is perfected,.. We shall be antisfied.
